General

The month was marked by the arrest of 7 traffickers with 380kg of pangolin scales, human bones and ivory tusks.

2 military men were arrested with 380kg of pangolin scales in the capital city Yaounde as they moved to sell the booty in a pickup car. A woman who was part of the deal and was arrested a couple of hours later at her residence. A house search at her premises would reveal several animal carcasses including pangolins. The military men explained explicitly how they used their military status to avoid arrest during trafficking. One of them was of the Presidential Guard, and was swiftly removed by his hierarchy following this arrest in a strong message that its uniforms will not be used to cover illegal activities, and any knowledge of an illegal activity will result in swift action. Despite the link between pangolins' consumption and the Covid-19 pandemic, the illegal trade goes on.

Investigations on wildlife trafficking in the West of the country, led to the discovery of network of human bones trafficking leading to the arrest of 2 with almost full 2 human skeletons packed inside two suitcases. This is the second network of human bones traffickers that has been busted, just one month away from a first operation that saw the arrest of 4 human bones traffickers in the same town. The two belong to a larger network that uses the internet to advertise their products under code names and equally search for clients who they claim included clients from abroad. One of the traffickers travelled from Ambam near the Cameroon south border to the west to carry out the transaction.

2 traffickers were arrested in Bertoua with 2 ivory tusks. One of them had been able to glide through law enforcement for several years as his involvement in ivory trafficking was well known and has been a target for investigations for a long time. He admitted to gold trafficking. They are a part of a network stretching to CAR and connected to Congo.
